OUR SATURDAY NIGHT.

No series of stories from Florida would be complete without a fish story, for next to the climate the fishing is one of the principal attractions. Northern fishermen are well satisfied with a string of bass or pike, and the capture of a twenty pound musky calls for a photograph of the fish and the nimble, but conditions down here are different, and while the table fish are of medium size, weighing from two to twenty-five pounds, the great game fish along the coast and in the harbors, weigh from fifty to two hundred pounds.

The tarpon, known as the king of the salt water tribe, in these waters, attracts fishermen to the west coast of Florida, the same as golf attracts the golfer to Pinehurst, and other famous resorts. The tarpon season commences in March and is at its best in April and May. Some of the winter resort hotels are kept open until the first of June to accommodate the tarpon fishermen. One of these, the Uzepe Inn, is located on Uzepe Island, in Charlotte Harbor, and a few miles away from two of the gulf passes, where the big fish come in from the gulf on the incoming tides.

The tarpon is said to belong to the mackerel family. He is the same shape, but covered with big silver scales, which sparkle like glass in the sunlight. He is as lively as a black bass from the time he is hooked until landed, and the fight usually lasts from one to two hours. When they strike a spoon, or pick up a bait from the bottom, they go into the air in an effort to throw the hook, and frequently succeed. When hooked, the fight is fast and furious and continues until the tackle breaks, or the fish is landed.

At this season of the year the tarpon runs up into the head waters of the streams to spawn, and so Peace river, which flows in front of the little town of Cleveland, has long been a favorite spawning ground for these big fish, which this year are unusually plentiful. Among the guests of the hotel at Cleveland are Mr. and Mrs. Cooper of Providence, Rhode Island. They have been here since November, as Mr. Cooper is obliged to spend his winters in the South on account of rheumatic trouble. He was for many years a prominent manufacturer in Providence.

The Coopers are typical New England people, well past middle life, wholesome and good natured with a tincture of Scotch blood which make them positive characters and persistent fishermen. When attired in khaki salt water suits they look the part of the genuine "old salt" and the reputation of the title is well sustained. When the tarpon appeared the Coopers decided that they must have a tarpon, and so with their power launch they started out with faith and strong determination.

The best fishing grounds are eight miles up the river, and here, day after day for a week they spent their time, hooking big fish and losing them, largely through lack of experience in handling big game of this kind. Finally they came in one evening, a week ago with a shark and a Jew fish, each weighing forty-five pounds, and both caught by Mrs. Cooper. Then she rested for a day or two and Mr. Cooper started out alone, for he said he would have a tarpon if it took all summer. That night he came in with his fish, which he fought for two hours in his boat alone, and finally landed him. His girth was thirty-six inches, his length seventy-seven inches and his weight one hundred and twenty-five pounds. The picture of Mr. Cooper and the fish verify the story.

Mrs. Cooper came to life again the next day, determined to redeem her laurels, but she was obliged to be satisfied with a few fish which weighed one hundred and seventy-five pounds. Some fish, by the way, for a woman to handle with a rod and reel, but she fought him to a finish alone, and came home smiling like a school girl.

Mr. Chahoon, who has been mentioned in these stories, is an old tarpon fisherman, but he is well on towards eighty, and for the past few years has abandoned the sport, which is somewhat strenuous. When the big fish was brought in his eyes sparkled with old-time fire, and the next morning he was off for the fishing grounds. By the middle of the forenoon his tarpon was hooked, and in fifty-five minutes he had him landed on the beach, and by four o'clock in the afternoon he was in the hands of the taxidermist, who has mounted a dozen of these big fish for him, in former years. The tarpon weighed one hundred and forty-six pounds, which is exactly what Mr. Chahoon weighs. The fight was man muscle against the liveliest fish that swims, and the weapon was a single line with heavy rod and reel.

The weight of all big fish is determined by measurement and it is practically correct. Square the girth in inches, multiply by the length in inches and divide by eight hundred. Try it on your next musky, before you put it on the scales.

The people of Punta Gorda went out on the end of the long dock, which extends for half a mile into the harbor, the other morning, to see a shark which five men had just landed. It was nearly ten feet long and heavy in proportion. The editor of the paper, in the little city, wrote it up, and to show that he was a good story teller, with a good imagination, he said that a couple of tourists were walking out on the dock, one dark night, not long ago, when they heard the whir of a motor, but there was no airplane in sight, and they were at a loss to account for the disturbance, until they glanced down into the water and there was a tarpon tearing about with his headlights on, going so fast that he generated his own electricity. To people who never held a reel carrying a thousand feet of line, with a tarpon attached one hundred feet away, and making for open water at fifty miles an hour, this story may be hard to swallow, but it may be true.

In 1914 there was exhibited in Chicago a mounted sea monster captured in Florida waters and the city papers devoted liberal space to pictures and description. The history, however, is worth reviewing, for it is the only specie of this kind in existence. Mr. William Bladen, of the Merchants' and Savings bank, was in Miami the other day, where this fish is on exhibition, and sends the following description:

The big fish was captured at Knights Key, Fla., on June 1st, 1912. It took five harpoons and 150 bullets to subdue the monster, and it fought for thirty-nine hours before it gave up the fight. It was then towed into Miami and pulled out of the water on the boat ways of Mr. W. I. Huffstetler, where most everybody in town saw it. It was so heavy that it broke down the ways. It was prepared for exhibition by Mr. J. S. Warmbath of Washington, who was sent down to Miami on the recommendation of the Smithsonian Institute of Washington, D. C.

This is a fish, not a whale, and furthermore, it is only a baby of its species. It had swallowed a blackfish that must have weighed 1,500 pounds. It is a deep sea fish that was driven to the surface by some volcanic eruption. The only one of its kind in existence. Come and hear the scientific lecture explaining its organic arrangement, anatomical structure in detail. An educational feature seldom offered to the public. The principal dimensions of the big fish are: Length, 45 feet; weight, 30,000 pounds; circumference, 23 feet, 9 inches; diameter, 8 feet, 3 inches; mouth (open), 31 inches; mouth, 43 inches deep; mouth, 33 inches wide; tongue, 40 inches long; several thousand teeth; hide, 3 inches thick, no scales; had swallowed an animal weighing 1,500 pounds; tail measures 10 feet from tip to tip; pectoral fin, 5 feet long, 3 feet wide; dorsal fin, 3 feet long, 2 feet 9 inches wide; gills, 4 feet long; the liver weighed 1,700 pounds.

Come and see for yourself and be convinced. This is a remarkable fish story, but its redeeming feature is that it is absolutely true, as can be vouched for by the city officials and thousands of people who saw the monster being captured by Captain Thompson. It was the most exciting experience any man ever witnessed. Captain Thompson ran a great danger, as the boat in which he stood was only twenty feet in length.

Mr. George Stevens, owner and proprietor of the Stevens House, that famous summer resort in the Adirondack mountains, spends his winters at Fort Meyers, twenty-five miles away. He is a life-long friend of Mr. Chahoon's, and came up the other day for a try at the tarpons. Mr. Stevens is a big man, and has hunted and fished all his life. After three days of unsuccessful effort, he hooked on to something yesterday afternoon that gave him the fight of his life.

The big fish took the bait about five o'clock and at dark the fight was still on. The boat was towed back and forth across the river, and finally headed for the open harbor. Mr. Stevens and his boatman fought him by turns until both men were exhausted, but made no more impression on him than they would on a German submarine. At dark the tackle gave out and the fish escaped a mile and a half down the river from where he was hooked. The supposition is that it was either a Jew fish weighing five or six hundred pounds, or a sawfish of about the same size—both are here and occasionally caught. Of course, the large fish always get away, but the condition of Mr. Stevens and his boatman, when they came in, evidenced that they had been mixed up in a hard fight.

ON THE SPUR of the MOMENT

ROY K. MOULTON

TACTICAL.
If I were running the war, I would be glad to see the Germans getting all mixed up in Russia. The further they go, the worse they will be mixed up. They will be thinned out and homesick. If the whole German army were sent to Russia, there would be only one man to every square mile. And then the western front could get up and move east about 500 miles. And it would be all over. This may be all right from a tactical standpoint. But it sounds good. Personally I couldn't wish Old Bloodshot Bill any more trouble than he is going to have in Russia in about three months.

Russia may win the war for the allies yet.

It is said the conductresses on the New York car lines are ringing up all the fares and the company is making more money than formerly. A lot of most women know how to make every nickel count.

Also—
Save your temper and win the war. Save your courage and win the war. But don't save your money. Buy draft stamps.

Now Trotsky is raising an army to fight the Germans. The Kaiser is welcome to all the fun he has in that country.

SIDE LIGHTS on the CIRCUS BUSINESS

By D. W. WAIT
Former Manager Burr Robbins and Later Treasurer of Adam Forepaugh Circuses.

On Wednesday evening, last, I had a talk with Fred J. Werrell, manager of the Ringling Show at Harbison. He gave me a few of the details on the opening of the world's greatest show for the season of '18 and '19. The show will open on Saturday, April 20 at the coliseum in Chicago for about two weeks after which they will go to St. Louis for one week which will be their last stand under canvas. All the ring stock, the elephants and the entire management will be shipped to Chicago in ample time for the opening. There, but most of the business, was done and all the work that the equipment will be shipped direct to St. Louis where everything will be put in readiness for the opening there immediately after the closing performance in Chicago. Many of the riders and other performers have been busy practicing in the ring barn in Harbison for some time.

Two big shows will carry a message of cheer and brighter things to every point in the literary haunts, taking the people's thoughts from serious matters and enjoying the fun and frolic of the circus by the roadside.

Along the muddy streets of "Ringlingville" that portion of Harbison that lies near the river bank and has been a playground for the circus for many years, there are many indications that the show is about ready to start. The ring house and commissary departments are packed on the wagon and covered with red canvas, all ready for shipment to St. Louis, the first city where the big tents go up.

One of the big elephants will be taken this year being to create a sensation and be received by tremendous applause. It is a patriotic little elephant and is the only one of its kind in the world that will be introduced during the entire performance by any act. Two of the largest and best trained elephants in each group take their positions on each side of the ring, and the circus is ready to be introduced during the entire performance by any act. Two of the largest and best trained elephants in each group take their positions on each side of the ring, and the circus is ready to be introduced during the entire performance by any act.

Over the "bull" section of the management will be a series of blue stars, indicating that number of the elephant men have enlisted. It is probable that a service tag will be carried near the head of the parade showing that nearly 200 of the Ringling forces have answered the call to the colors. With this exception, the show will be little different from the struggle going on over the seas. The general admission price this season will be increased to 50c which will include the side show admission will be increased to 25c and it is not likely the show standing the war tax on these two items. The big show goes out this season complete in every department and a prosperous season is confidently anticipated.

Frank Hogan of this city, who for several years has been ticket seller for the Barnum and Bailey show had to resign his position last week, when he received a telegram from New York asking him to be on time for the opening in the Madison Square Garden. Frank has been called to the colors and is ordered to leave next Wednesday. Frank's smiling face will be missed around the Harbison circus, but he has given his five or six years of faithful service he had made many friends.

The following letter brought sad news of the death of Mrs. Orrin Hollis, which happened in a tragic accident during the circus business for many years and the writer traveled with them in the old Adam Forepaugh show in the Harbison circus. Mrs. Hollis and their son Plinky, were the principal riders with the Coup and went show which exhibited in Harbison two years ago. Many in the circus business are friends in their home town who will mourn the loss of Mrs. Hollis, for no one knew her, but who loved her. Mr. Hollis has lost a faithful wife and the boys a loving mother.

Mrs. Orrin Hollis, of the Orrin Hollis Troupe of Riders, of Harbison, was fatally burned at her home there Monday evening, March 21, during the following morning. The accident happened when she tried to lift a lamp out of a bracket on the wall in the kitchen and the lamp slipped out of her hands and set fire to her clothing. Mrs. Hollis was burning clothing from her, and in doing so badly burned both of her hands. Plinky Hollis also tried to save his mother by throwing a blanket around her, but the blanket caught fire. The funeral services were held at the residence and the body interred at Harbison. The floral offerings were many. Among the professional folks who attended the funeral were Mr. and Mrs. Reno McGee Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Billy Denton, Harry Clark, Henry C. Stanton, James Spriggs and Fred Ser. Mrs. Hollis was survived by her father and mother, two sons, one sister and a brother, William Cameron.

Notes on Red Cross Work

(Arranged by Mrs. Abbie Helms.)
A splendid response was given by the people of Harbison to the call of the Red Cross for used clothing for the use of the British relief in France and Belgium. Eighteen cases have been packed with a weight of 2,200 pounds of really substantial clothing. Since then a mass of excellent shoes, coats, hats, and other articles, as well as a mass of baby clothing, also the same of warm winter coats for women, women's suits, and children's wear, both men, women and children, were received in abundance. A case was packed full of baby clothing and another packed with the fine and babies. Little dresses, flannels, coats and hoodies were packed away in the cases by the women in charge, with a good wish in every fold for the babies of the stricken land. Bedding, blankets and warm shawls were also brought in and packed in the cases. The warm heart of the community was touched by this appeal. And it was not the customs, which people did not want, that they gave—they divided freely and gave what they could spare for this need. The people in the country, too, were most generous and brought in bundles of everything needed, after telephoning their intentions before hand and making inquiries as to what was wanted. Mrs. Stanley Smith and Mrs. Maud Stouffer, in charge of the store room where the articles were received and put in a hard week at the work. They were assisted in the packing by others when occasion demanded, and many others were helpful in doing favors for the cause. The use of the store room was donated by Albert Schuller, and was a convenient place for the work.

Hospital Supplies Committee.—This committee has received this week another letter from Chicago headquarters expressing satisfaction with the work accomplished and repeating the request already received, that the work marked in the same class, and adding that the garments sent from Harbison are of the best quality and according to standards. This committee acknowledges receipt of boxes of excellent garments from La Prairie, Ontario, and other details are also given. Also generous donations of service by Mr. Kennedy of the Singer Sewing Machine company, and the gift of a machine by August Reicheit, Harbison. The packers of this department and of the refugees clothing department are greatly indebted to Harry Jones for the loan of a wagon, carried by Harry Jones, for the purpose of this department. ## Resume of Moving Picture Programs Of The Week

(By Mrs. Abbie Helms.)
The moving picture business of the world will be dominated by German Kultur if the plans of a film company in Berlin materialize. In this country, there has been started and is preparing to do business along that line. The sorrows of the poor working girl were shown by the picture "Whims of Society," seen at the Beverly Saturday. It was rather depressing but well done along the line represented. The point of the story was that the working class have no sense to their credit than the working girls when they patronized.

On Sunday was seen Viola Dana in a pathetic, sweet rendition of Myranda's Weaver of Dreams. The love story of the aged lovers was very well worked out and Viola Dana in her rendition of her lovers gave a pretty interpretation of the part. Geraldine Farrar in "The Devil Stone," gave a wonderful character study of the little Breton fisher girl, who found a large emerald on the seashore and was afterwards married by a thief for the treasure he turned to London. She was obliged to kill him in self-defense, but after suffering up her stone for the service of the church, she was allowed to leave and live. The whole thing was put out in a very artistic way, and was very pleasing in its setting.

A bright, cheerful little story was told by Marguerita Fischer in "Molly Go Get 'Em." She was full of pranks and the consequences she brought on herself were many and dire. However, she proved that her sense of humor was a blessing, as part of her misdeeds were forgiven.

The "Poor Little Rich Girl" of Mary Pickford was a welcome return picture to our city and was an opportunity to see it when here before. It is especially appropriate for children and they enjoy its humorous features very much, and appreciate the trials as well as the naughty actions of Mary.

Earle Williams, in the Oppenheim story made into a play called "The Balance," has the part of a man of ill country who falls into love with an actress of the London stage. His whole nature and training is against her world, but he follows her to town to press his suit, and comes in contact with a prince who tries to show him the pleasures of the city and win him from his allegiance. A Russian dancer is introduced to him and tries her charms upon him, but to no avail. The machinations of the prince are finally brought to naught and the couple are united.

At the Apollo the mirth-provoking Madge Kennedy is at her best in a clever play of mixed situations called "Our Little Wife." The motive of the story is that the bride, who has several disappointed suitors, is so sorry for them that she insists on being taken with her herself and husband on their honeymoon. Complications ensue which are ridiculous and have unforeseen results. Another mishap occurs on the anniversary of the wedding day when more amusing situations and misunderstandings result. The supporting class are all good players and the play is well staged.

In "Castro," in "Castro 93," in the first part of the play, is in a prison working out a sentence. She wins the confidence of her prison mate, an old offender, and after they are out-sold by others, she is again in prison. Irene is prosperous, and she and the gang put up a job to rob her guests during a party to be held at the home. The leader pulls off the stunt, the gang is surprised and well worked out, and the whole play quite thrilling.

The weekly letter showed tests of the Browning gun, views of the Italian front, the work of a new machine for searching for submarines, and a British tank on view in New York to encourage recruiting.

News Notes from Movieland

BY DAISY DEAN

May Allison, the popular screen star, who appears with Harold Lockwood in Metro wonderplays, was born on a plantation in Georgia. As a young girl she nursed an ambition to be a grand opera prima donna. She possesses a rare lyric soprano voice which she cultivated for three years. Miss Allison's first public appearance was when she was still in her early teens. She wrote the lyrics and composed the score for a light opera, and she played the leading role also. Against the wishes of her family Miss Allison insisted upon a stage career. At length, when they found they could not persuade her to give up this ambition, Miss Allison's mother accompanied her to New York, where she went to seek an engagement.

Miss Allison's striking beauty at once impressed Henry W. Savage and he engaged her for the role of "Eve" in his big stage production, "Eve's Woman." Later she was given the part of "Beauty."

After several other stage successes Miss Allison listened to the urging of friends and took a role in the screen production of "David Harum." Next she appeared on the screen with Edith Wynne Mathison in "The Governor's Lady," and then working with a big screen star with the American-Mutual in "The House of a Thousand Scandals." It was then that she met Mr. Lockwood and they have appeared together since.

CLAY GREENE BLIND

Clay M. Greene, former shepherd of the Lambs, and one of the best known writers of the screen, went suddenly blind in Los Angeles a few days ago while enjoying a card game at his club. Greene, who had been afflicted with falling eyesight for some time, fell a victim to vitreous hemorrhage. He is being attended at a local hospital, but it is feared that any possibility of seeing his eyesight is far removed. The many fans who have enjoyed his work in the past will regret the affliction visited upon him, and join in extending heartiest sympathy.

May Allison, in this hour of his affliction, FAIRBANKS MAY TROUPE

Douglas Fairbanks declares that he is considering the advisability of getting together a wild west show from the recent rodeo staged by him, and playing it across the country for the Red Cross or the third Liberty loan. He has stated that this is the only way he will make the trip. Several theatrical offers were turned down by him.

George Denton, well known actor of the screen, was found dead a few nights ago in his apartments in New York City. Gas, which escaped from a small stove near the bed, was the cause of death. Suicide is not suspected. Denton had won quite a bit of fame in the films. His demise will be regretted by his followers.

Harry McKee Webster, president of the organization bearing his name, has commenced work on a seven-reel feature, "Reclaimed," by Richard Field Carroll. A special company has been engaged for the production. The story is both new and original. It is promised. Webster started his screen career as a director for Essanay.

She looked forward. "Do you really mean it?" she cried. "How can you, after all I've done, after the way I've treated you and the things I've said? You must hate me. Every one does. I hate myself. You can't forgive me! You can't!"

His answer was to hold out his arms.

Another moment and she was in them, clinging to his wet coat, sobbing, holding him fast and begging him not to leave her, to take her away; that she would work, that she would not be a burden to him—only take her with him and try to forgive her, for he was real and honest and the only friend she had.

And Captain Elsha, soothing her, stroking her hair and murmuring words of love and tenderness, realized that his labor and sacrifice had not been in vain; that there was his recompense—she would never misunderstand him again; she was his at last.

CHAPTER XVII. The Rejection.

WHEN the apartment was given up and Captain Elsha and his wards moved to the little house in Westchester county, Annie came with them. Mrs. Moriarty came one week to do the laundry work. Caroline acted as a sort of housekeeper, but willing, supervising housekeeper.

The house had been procured through the kind interest of Sylvester. Caroline took a domestic science course at a university. She could not quite understand how her uncle retained the valuable paintings of their old home. One day at her request her uncle told her the true story of Mr. Pearson's relations with her father. Caroline wrote to Pearson apologizing for her conduct, but she got her uncle's promise not to invite Pearson to call. However, the captain forgot all about it, and Pearson appeared. As he turned in at the front walk Caroline came out of the door. They met face to face.

It was a most embarrassing situation, particularly for Caroline, yet, with feminine resourcefulness, she dissembled her embarrassment to some extent and acknowledged his statement "Good afternoon, Miss Warren," with a cool, almost cold, "How do you do, Mr. Pearson?" which chilled his pleasure at seeing her and made him wish devoutly that he had not been such a fool as to come. However, there he was, and he hastily explained his presence by telling her of the captain's invitation for that day, how he had expected to meet him at the station and, not meeting him, had walked up to the house.

"Is he in?" he asked.

No, Captain Elsha was not in. He had gone to see a sailboat man. Not hearing from his friend, he concluded the latter would not come until the next day. "He will be so sorry," said Caroline.

He was turning to go, but she stopped him.

"You mustn't go, Mr. Pearson," she said. "You must come in and wait. Captain Warren will be back soon, I'm sure."

Pearson was reluctant, but he could think of no reasonable excuse. So he entered the house, removed his overcoat and hat and seated himself in the living room to await the captain's return.

They were deep in the discussion of the novel when Captain Elsha walked into the living room. He was surprised, stating his feelings at their midst, to find them together, but he did not express his astonishment. Pearson did not take the next train nor the next. Instead, he stayed for dinner and well into the evening, and when he did go it was after a prompt acceptance of the captain's invitation to "come again in a mighty little while."

Pearson came again a week later and thereafter frequently. The sessions with Cap'n Jim, the hero of the novel, and his associates were once more regular happenings, to be looked forward to and enjoyed by the three.

In June two very important events took place. The novel was finished, and Stephen, his sophomore year at an end, came home from college. He had been invited by some classmates to spend a part of his vacation with them on the Maine coast, and his guardian had consented to his doing so. But the boy himself had something else to "Say," he said, "I've been thinking a good deal while I've been away this last time. Now, the way I look at it, this college course of mine isn't worth while. And the kind of work I want to do doesn't need university training. I want to be down on the street, as the governor was. If this rubber company business hadn't knocked us out I intended as soon as I was of age to take that sort of his and start in for myself. Well, that chance has gone, but I mean to get in some way, though I have to start at the foot of the ladder. Now, why can't I leave college and start now? It will be two years gained, won't it?"

Captain Elsha seemed pleased, but he shook his head.

"How do you know you'd like it?" he asked. "You've never tried."

"No, I never have, but I'll like it, all right. I know I shall. It's what I've wanted to do ever since I was old enough to think of such things. Just let me start in now, right away, and I'll show you. I'll make good, you see if I don't."

That evening the captain made a definite proposal to Stephen. It was briefly that, while not consenting to the latter's leaving college, he did consider that a trial of the work in a broker's office might be a good thing. Therefore if the young man wished he could enter the employ of a friend of Sylvester and remain during July and August.

The novel, the wonderful tale which Captain Elsha was certain would make its author famous, was finished that very day in June when Stephen came back from New Haven.

The advance copy, the first one, was ready early in September, and the author, of course, brought it immediately to his friends. They found the dedication especially interesting. "To C. W. and E. W., consulting specialists at the literary clinics, with grateful acknowledgments." Probably Captain Elsha was never prouder of anything, even his first command, than of that dedication.

And the story, when at last it appeared for sale, was almost from the beginning a success, and, most important of all perhaps, it sold and continued to sell. There was something in it, its humanity, its simplicity, its clearly marked characters, which made a hit. Pearson no longer needed to seek publishers; they sought him. His short stories were bid for by the magazines, and his prices climbed and climbed. He found himself suddenly planted in the middle of the highway to prosperity.

The novel being out of the way and its successor not yet far enough advanced in plot or general plan for much discussion, the "literary clinics" were no longer as frequent. But Pearson's visits to the Warren house were not discontinued. All summer long he had been coming out once and usually twice a week. Captain Elsha had told him not to stand on formality, to come any time, and he did. On most of these occasions he found the captain at home, but if only Caroline was there he seemed quite contented. The captain was planning a glorious Thanksgiving. At least it would be glorious to him, for he intended spending the day and several days at his own home in South Denboro. He would not leave Caroline, of course; she was going with him. Steve would be there, though he would not come until Thanksgiving day itself. Sylvester also would be of the party. He seemed delighted at the opportunity. Pearson was asked and had accepted. His going was so far a settled thing that he had commissioned Captain Elsha to purchase a stateroom for him on the Fall River boat, for, of course, the captain would not consider their traveling the entire distance by train. A day or two later Pearson announced that he had decided not to go.

"Hey?" Captain Elsha could scarcely believe he had heard correctly. "You can't go to South Denboro?"

"No."

"Why not, for the land sakes? Come here! Let me look at you."

He took the young man by the arm and led him, almost by main strength, close to the lighted window of the station.

"Humph!" he grunted after a moment's scrutiny. "You've made up your mind; I can see that. Have you told Caroline? Does she know?"

Pearson smiled, but there was little mirth in the smile. "I think she agrees with me that it is best," he observed.

"Humph!" she does, hey? I want to know! Look here, Jim! Have you and she—"

He got no further, for Pearson broke away, with a hurried "Good night!" strode up the platform to meet the city bound train. Captain Elsha entered the house by the back door, a remnant of South Denboro habit, and saw his niece, a shadowy figure, seated by the window. He crossed to her side.

"Well, Caroline," he said cheerfully "I'm home again. Dearie, I just see Jim Pearson. He tells me he's decided not to go on this cape cruise of ours."

He said you agreed with him 'twas best he shouldn't go. Do you mind telling me why? Have you and he had a fallin' out?"

Still she was silent. He sighed.

"Well," he observed, "I see you have, and I don't blame you for not wanting to talk about it. I'm awful sorry. I'd begun to hope that— However, we'll change the subject."

"Uncle," she said, "you know I always want to talk to you. Mr. Pearson and I have not quarreled, but I think—I think it best that I should not see him again. It would only make it harder for him, and it's of no use."

Captain Elsha sighed again. "I guess I understand Caroline. I presume likely I do. He—he asked some thing of you, and you couldn't say yes to him. That was it, I suppose. Needn't tell me unless you really want to, you understand," he added hastily.

"But I do. I ought to tell you. Uncle Elsha, Mr. Pearson asked me to be his wife."

The captain gave no evidence of surprise.

"Yes," he replied gravely; "I judged that was it. And you told him you couldn't, I suppose. Well, dearie, that's a question nobody ought to answer but the one. You didn't care for him enough, I suppose. Caroline, you don't care for anybody else, do you? You don't still care for that other fellow, that—"

"Uncle," she sprang up, hurt and indignant, "how can you? What must I have said to you? What must you think of me?"

"Please, Caroline," he protested; "please don't. I beg your pardon. I was a fool. I knew better. Don't go. Tell me the real reason. Now tell me. Was it that you couldn't care for Jim enough?"

"—I like Mr. Pearson very much. I respect and admire him."

"But you don't love him. I see. Well," sadly, "there's another one of my dreams gone to smash. However, you did just right, dearie. Feelin' that way, you couldn't marry him, of course."

"That was not the reason," she said in a low tone.

"Hey?" He bent toward her. "What?" he asked. "That wasn't the reason, you say? You do care for him?"

She was silent.

"Do you?" he repeated gently. "And yet you sent him away. Why?"

She faltered, tried to speak and then turned away. He put his arm about her and stroked her hair.

"Don't you cry, dearie," he begged. "I won't bother you any more. You can tell me some other time—if you want to. Or you needn't tell me at all. It's all right; only don't cry."

"I mustn't be so silly," she said. "I had made up my mind to tell you everything and I shan't. My not caring for Mr. Pearson was not my reason for refusing him. He would marry me, poor as I am. And perhaps I—perhaps I should say yes if things were different. I know I should say yes and be very, very happy. But I can't and I won't! I won't! I suppose you think I have been perfectly satisfied to let you take care of me and of my brother and give us a home and all that we needed and more, but I have not been contented with that, nor has Steve. He and I have made our plans, and we shall carry them out. He will leave college in two years and go to work in earnest. Before that time I shall be ready to teach. I have been studying with just that idea in view. I haven't told you before, uncle, but one of the domestic science teachers at the university is a girl I used to know slightly. She is going to be married next year, and if all goes well I may be appointed to her position when she leaves. Steve and I have planned it all. His salary at first will be small, and so will mine, but together we can earn enough to live somehow, and later on when he earns more perhaps we may be able to repay a little of all that you have given us. We shall try. I shall insist upon it."

Dinner Stories

The man in the next flat was pounding on the wall.

"Look here," he cried. "I can't sleep with that kid yelling like that."

Neighbor—Halloo, Jennings! How are you? Haven't seen you in the garden for quite a while, and you never come and see the wife and me now. Why is that?

Jennings—Well, the fact is, old chap, that it's not through ill-will or bad feeling, or anything like that, you know; only you and Mrs. Possa more have borrowed so many things from me that when I see your place it makes me feel quite homesick.

Little Mary was not accustomed to the saying of grace. One night she went for supper with the next-door neighbor.

"Daddy," said she the next morning, "what was it Mr. Smith read off the platter?"

"Won't you come to one of my young men's evenings? You should always be careful of what company you keep. One becomes like one's associates, you know."

"I don't know so much about that, mum. Why, I been 'sociated with fish all my life and I can't swim a stroke."

"In your christening talk sermon this morning you spoke of a baby as 'a new wave on the ocean of life,' said the church warden to the vicar in the vestry."

"Yes," agreed the vicar. "It was a poetic figure of speech."

"Don't you think 'a fresh squall' would have hit the mark better?" asked the warden, who is several times a father.

If you don't make him stop, I will.

"Come right in," said the baby's father. "You'll be as welcome as flowers in spring."

"The next day after Billy Bunny arrived at Uncle Lucky's house the kind old gentleman rabbit said: "Go out for a ride on the old pump. That's the name of Uncle Lucky's new car, you know. So they started, and this time you can believe the old gentleman rabbit about the pump. He was driving oil, and he had forgotten the time some man takes ago he had been caught without lights on his automobile. As it was just going to start when the newspaper man came to explain to the poor Uncle Lucky had been arrested for not having his lights on. He started off—not the pump, but Billy Bunny and the lucky, and the Duke. And if you don't know the Duke is, I'll tell you; he's the husband of a Duke that has a great deal of his time swimming in the pond while the other Duke and the little Ducks. Well, if Billy Bunny hadn't stopped the automobile where he did, Mrs. Duck would have been a widow.

"What are you going?" shouted Uncle Lucky, getting very red in the face.

"I didn't you took your horn," said the Duke with an air of consequence, as he splashed into the water and swam away.

"Can you expect of an old fellow like that?" laughed Uncle Lucky, watching Mr. Duck's noble swimmer.

"He's an old-fashioned side-saddle man," said the kind old growl of him too.

old gentleman rabbit as he leaned out of the automobile and handed a stick of candy to a little Goose who had stood by listening with eyes and bill wide open to the tale he had told.

Then the old gentleman rabbit looked out his wedding stovepipe hat and bowed to Mrs. Duck, who stood in the doorway of her house, and toothed his horn and drove off.

And by and by Billy Bunny asked Uncle Lucky, "Why do you call that automobile so old the old gentleman rabbit changed seats with his little nephew, and after that he felt asleep. For the road was very smooth and the wind was so soft and warm that he didn't want to talk all the time the way some boys do. And as Billy Bunny didn't want to wake him up, he kept on going farther and farther away from home, and he didn't know where he was, himself, in a tick words. And then the automobile came to a stop and Uncle Lucky, of course, woke up with a bump."

"Gracious me! Have I been asleep?" asked the rabbit, with his hat eyes with his left hind foot. And just then a little flower struck four o'clock, just like a little clock, and that's the reason they call this little flower "Four o'clock." "Gracious me! I must have been asleep!" cried Uncle Lucky, and then he took out the lunch basket and he and Billy Bunny ate a lot of nice things. But goodness me, it's so late now, and it's getting dark, and it isn't time for the two little rabbits to get home. But I guess they'll cuddle up in the Lucky-mobile and sleep until

SAVING WILL BEGIN
TOMORROW MORNING

"Sit down; don't slip off!"

This is the official advice regarding the hour which will be dropped Sunday morning, the hour from 2 to 3 o'clock.

Such advice may be needed, statisticians declare, for the things that the losing of an hour signify are many and various.

The earth would be 1,000 miles behind in its daily revolution, 80,000 in its annual journey around the sun, and a vastly larger distance in its plunge through space in the company of the solar system.

The ordinary human being would be some 4,200 pulsations of the heart and 1,300 breaths behind, in event of the loss of an hour.

But the defect of the kaiser would be delayed for a definite period. This however, is partially remedied by the fact that the kaiser played polo, and the polo world would be delayed an equal time.

Trains Off Schedule.

The New York Central lines would be some sixty miles and eleven minutes off schedule.

Thousands of workmen in America who would happen to be working Sunday morning would find their hour really lost, would be an hour's wages to the good, and the thousands of employers employing them would be an hour's labor for nothing.

Some 100,000,000 Americans—all of them who happened to be asleep at the time of the loss—would find their night's sleep extremely short.

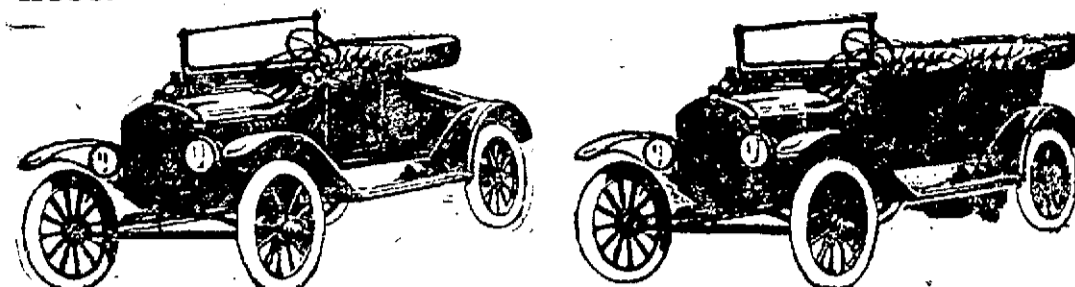

Sunday morning church goes, if there were no warning of the change, would be uniformly one hour late to the services.

Such things, however, are to be avoided in making the change, because of the fact that it is clock time and not sun time which the president ordered changed. The whole of his choice is a most curious question.

Automobile thieves and joy-riders beware.

"Because some people do not realize the severe penalties which are in store for any person or persons caught violating the practice of stealing automobiles and taking joy rides and then abandoning the car comes to an immediate halt. I will take action," said Chief of Police Peter D. Champion last evening.

During the past two or three weeks several reports have been made to the police that cars have been taken and abandoned in various parts of the city. The offenders had taken a ride.

Last evening at about eight o'clock a Ford car belonging to Grant Hall, 318 East 12th street, was taken out in front of Ryan's livery stable. After a careful search the car was found abandoned on North Main street this morning, where the offenders had left it.

Under the laws any such offenders found guilty of the offense are liable to a sentence of five years in the state prison and a fine of $2,000 in addition.

Disastrous Fire Early This Morning.—In Evansville, March 30.—Early this morning—between 5:30 and 6 o'clock—the large barns on the W. R. Patterson farm, one and a half miles from the city, were consumed to the ground. The farm is owned by Mr. Patterson's son-in-law, George Morrison and family, who have just moved there. The first of the new barns, it appears, but as both barns were connected, a fire in one was sure to take the other. The origin of the fire was not known. None of the feed had been to the barn this morning. Not only the barns burned but six head of young cattle, fifteen-seven young pigs and three dogs. The machinery and household furniture, and the house on the farm were saved, but at times it was feared that the house would burn. Both Mr. Patterson and his family were safe. The buildings and stock on the stock.

The benefit given by the W. R. C. at the Magee Opera House last evening drew forth a packed house, and the committee were well repaid for the patronage extended to them for their proceeds, clear of expense, was about $50. They also feel very grateful to Mr. and Mrs. Morrison for the excellent music which was furnished for the occasion by the Harmonic orchestra. William Antes was unable to sing because of illness.

Jas. A. Drummond Handles the Famous Avery Tractor Line

Local Buick Dealer Has Taken Over the Agency For the Avery Tractor At a Most Opportune Time, Solving the Problem of Raising More Food With Less Labor and Expense.

Almost every farmer of Rock county is asking: "How am I going to run my farm since all the boys are being drafted to fight for democracy?"
And again, "How can I raise my crop without so much expense?"

Mr. James Drummond of this city has solved the problem of raising more food with less expense and less labor, and do it better and when it should be done. Mr. Drummond being a wide-awake business man of today, has been studying the situation some years; he is one of the most successful auto dealers of today, having handled the Buick car for some time.

Mr. Drummond has taken over the agency for the famous Bull Dog Avery Tractor line, and is thus doing his bit to help win the war by solving the food and labor problem of today.

According to the present prices of grain and hay it cost the farmer over $200 per year for each work horse and the farmer who has five to eight horses must pay from $1200 to $1600 for feed per year; this cuts quite a slice out of his profits. All the feed the horse eats can be converted to food, the grain being used as cereals while the roughness can be fed to cows and beef cattle, and thus milk and beef for food. Also it requires three acres to feed a man and five acres to feed a horse. Which shall he feed—the idle horse which only works 100 days a year and eats 365 days, or the soldier in France?

Why not sell his horses and get an Avery farm tractor so that he can use more of his acres for feeding men? He will not only be performing a patriotic duty to his country, but will also be able to raise his crops much cheaper.

Mr. Drummond has Averages in six different sizes, so that a man with a small farm can own one as well as a man with a large farm. The Avery will do good belt work in grinding feed for cows and filling silos and by getting a small separator it will do threshing when you are ready for it, and numerous other small jobs, as well as plowing, disking, cultivating, harrowing and all kinds of spring and fall work.

USE AN AVERY KEROSENE TRACTOR

SIX REASONS FOR AVERY KEROSENE TRACTOR SUCCESS

First—Avery Tractors have a special sliding frame which makes possible the elimination of the intermediate gear, shaft and boxings. An Avery Tractor has the least gears, the least shafting and the least bearings of any two-speed, double drive tractors built—which means more power and longer life.

Second—Avery Tractors have two rear drive wheels and two speeds—a big advantage over single-drive and one-speed tractors.

Third—Avery Tractors have slow speed, heavy duty opposed motors—not high speed, light automobile motors.

Fourth—Avery crankshafts are one-half the diameter of the cylinder or more.
You don't need to be afraid of having a broken crankshaft.

Fifth—Avery motors have renewable inner cylinder walls. These wearing parts can be replaced without buying an entirely new cylinder.

Sixth—Avery Tractors are entirely free from all pumps and fans. All such easily broken and troublesome parts are done away with in the construction of an Avery Tractor.

THERE'S A SIZE AVERY TRACTOR FOR EVERY SIZE FARM

These six sizes of Avery Kerosene Tractors make Tractor Farming a success on any size farm—large, medium or small. Avery Tractors are built in sizes for pulling any number from one to ten plows. You can get an Avery Tractor in the size that exactly fits your size farm.

With any of these Avery Kerosene Tractors you can make tractor farming a success. You can raise bigger and better crops and do the work cheaper, easier and at the right time. With the added profits you and your family can enjoy life more.

LET AN AVERY KEROSENE TRACTOR START MAKING MORE MONEY FOR YOU

Right now is the time you should buy an Avery Kerosene Tractor and let it start making money for you.

No other tractors have met such tests as have the Avery's. They have been entered in every important public contest and demonstration. They are equipped with Duplex Gasifiers, a device which turns kerosene into gas and makes them the only tractors that burn All the kerosene.

They have proven to be successful money-makers by thousands of owners.
The Avery Catalog contains facts you ought to know about Tractor Farming.

LINE

A WONDERFUL INVENTION AVERY GASIFIER—TURNS KEROSENE INTO GAS

We have discovered the way to burn kerosene more successfully than it has ever been done before in a tractor. Avery Tractors burn all of the kerosene instead of wasting part of it on account of it not being fully vaporized. Avery Tractors burn kerosene so successfully that we are able to use the lubricating oil over and over again instead of using it only once and then wasting it. Avery Tractors don't just run on kerosene—they burn all the kerosene.

Avery Tractors are equipped with double carburetors. The motor is started on gasoline and when it warms up you pull the lever and switch over to kerosene without having to make a single adjustment of any kind.

But while a carburetor will mix gasoline with air and form a gas, no carburetor has as yet been designed which will successfully handle kerosene. We accordingly place on each cylinder head of an Avery Tractor our Duplex Gasifier, which takes the mixture of kerosene and air as it comes from the carburetor and so reduces the particles of kerosene and mixes them with the air as to form a gas that burns more successfully than kerosene has ever been burned before. Avery Tractors are the only tractors with double carburetor and duplex gasifier fuel system.

The 1917 National Tractor Demonstration proved Avery Tractors to be real kerosene burners.

The rules of the demonstration were that a tractor which burned kerosene was allowed only 5 per cent as much gasoline as kerosene for starting. Avery Tractors did more.

They burned kerosene without calling for any more gasoline for starting during the entire week than the 5 per cent allowed for the first day's filling of kerosene.

They burned kerosene without a lot of black smoke coming out of the exhaust.

Without kerosene passing the pistons and cutting the lubrication—the oil in the crank-case did not have to be changed.

A couple of sizes Avery Tractors even burned distillate.

Get all the facts—There is a size Avery Kerosene Tractor to fit every size farm—six sizes, from 5-10 to 40-50 H. P. There is also a size Avery Tractor Plow and a size Avery Thresher to fit every size tractor. Write for a free copy of the new 1918 Avery Catalog and get all the facts. Come in and look them over.

"THAT'S THE BEST INVESTMENT I EVER MADE"

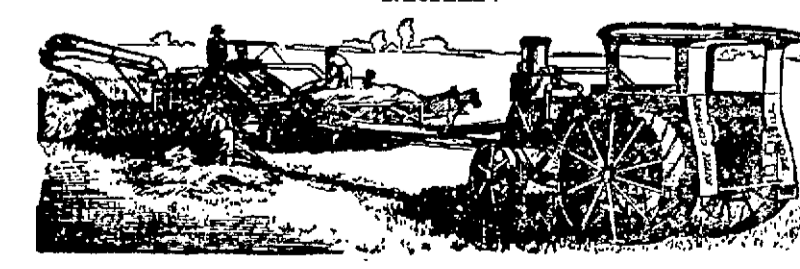

This is what Avery Tractor Owners are telling their neighbors every day.
And here's why:

They are able to do their work cheaper, easier and better than they did when they used horses, and to enjoy their farm work more.

By being able to plow deeper and at the right time they are raising larger crops. They have less chores every day—you don't have to take care of a tractor three times a day. And they save expense—you can't turn a switch and stop a horse eating like you can a tractor.

It's the best farm investment you can make—you'll never regret it. Come in and talk tractors with us today. We have a size Avery Kerosene Tractor for every size farm.

DON'T WASTE ANY OF YOUR HIGH-PRICED GRAIN

Your grain is too valuable this year to blow into the straw stack. You want it put in your wagon box so you can cash in on it.

When you get your grain threshed with an Avery Tractor Outfit you are sure of saving 99 5/100 per cent or more of it. Avery "Yellow Fellow" Separators are guaranteed to save this amount. In 27 field tests threshing on canvas they saved 99 5/100 per cent of the grain threshed, practically perfect—the most wonderful grain saving record ever made by any make of separator.

Avery Kerosene Tractors furnish strong, steady power for all kinds of belt work. They have special low speed opposed tractor motors, renewable inner cylinder walls, two speed, double drive transmissions, sliding frames which eliminate all surplus gears and shafting; no pumps or fan; and special gasifiers for burning kerosene and other low grade fuels.

Avery Tractor Threshing Outfits are built in six sizes to fit any size farm, while Avery Tractor Threshing Outfits are built in five sizes to fit any size run. The Avery Catalog contains all the facts about both these outfits.
